

Dear Sirs:

Don't let the phone companies have exclusive rights to the e-mail systems. Why do they have more opportunities than the small companies? Isn't this a free enterprise society? Yes, I am sure, they would like to have exclusive right to provide internet service, but this is not good for the customer. Customers have rights also.

Free enterprise is best for the public. Competition is the only thing that keeps the price down. Please help those of us who are on Social Security not to be victimized again. Chris Meyer
